Fundamental analysis summary

Berkshire Hathaway Inc. is a holding company owning subsidiaries engaged in various business activities. Its growth is not steady as part of its income comes from non-operation activities (investing). Therefore, there can be a lot of fluctuations in the financial statements. However, its core business is steady and growing slowly. The main competitive advantage of the company lies in the long track-record of Warren Buffet as a professional investor, who was able year after year to generate value for its shareholders.

Technical analysis summary

Its share price has lost 10% the past month and it has struggle to find a support. The market is pricing core activities which are negatively impacted by COVID-19. RSI level is approaching oversold range and volume is decreasing.
